How to Get a Copy of an Article Online

Many articles can be obtained by Georgia Tech students online from the Georgia Tech library web site. This document describes how Georgia Tech students can do this.

At some point in the process below you may be requested to log in. You will log in using your GT account and password. If this does not work you'll have to ask for assistance getting access to the system at the library.

1. Go to the Georgia Tech Library web site: www.library.gatech.edu
2. Click on "eJournals".
3. Locate the journal either by browsing by journal title, or by doing a search.
4. Click on the journal title.
5. Click on one of the sources to access the journal articles online. (Sometimes you have a choice of more than one source. Not all sources cover the same volumes of the journal.)
6. Log in using your GT account and password.
7. Locate the desired article. You may have to click on yet another link to (finally) retrieve the actual article; this final link may be labeled as "PDF Full Text."

If you have any problems obtaining materials, let a librarian in the Georgia Tech library know. Often there are problems with the online sources of journals that the library should be made aware of. If you still cannot obtain the article, let your instructor know well in advance of the class for which the article is needed.
